YOUR CHILD AND THE INTERNET

The Children's Department of Jesse Smith Library reminds parents that they are ultimately responsible for deciding if and how their child will use the internet in the public library. The computers in the Children's Department are available to kids 13 years and younger who have a library card. Library staff does not monitor each child's individual use.

Parent's who wish to restrict their child's internet use need to contact a library staff member who can put a message on the child's card. For more information on this topic and some suggested websites on how to keep your kids safe on the internet, pick up a "Your Child and The Internet" brochure in the Children's Department.

"NO INTERNET USE"
